What is this research about?

Nā tō rourou, nā taku rourou, ka ora ai ō tātou whānau

This whakataukī encapsulates the notion that while working in isolation might result in survival, working together as a whānau can take us beyond survival and onto prosperity.

Wāhine whaikaha, D/deaf and disabled women experience high rates of family and sexual violence.

Over the past few years the New Zealand Government has done a lot of work to understand family and sexual violence, and to develop a whole of government approach to its prevention.

This research supports the government's commitment to eliminate violence and abuse and to reduce its impact on wāhine whaikaha, D/deaf and disabled women. It will generate knowledge that will help sectors to learn from each other, collaborate, and use their individual and shared expertise to respond to violence and abuse experienced by disabled women.

The aim of this research is to co-design a model that can help change the way supports and services work, so they are rights-based and responsive to wahine whaikaha, D/deaf, and disabled women who have experienced violence and abuse.

Mā wai e whai wāhi ki tēnei rakahau?

Who can participate in this research?

For this part of the research, your service has been identified by the research team as a key service in your area working with wāhine whaikaha, D/deaf, and disabled women who experience family and sexual violence. If your service has not worked with disabled women, we want to understand the barriers, and what you think needs to be changed to enable services in your area to meet their needs.

We are not asking questions about the violence that disabled women have experienced. We are asking about how services in your area provide support and resources to wāhine whaikaha, D/deaf and disabled women who have experienced family and sexual violence.

All participants must be over the age of 18 and be able to provide informed consent to participate.

Mē pēhea au e tohu i taku aro ki tēnei kaupapa?

Korero Whakamarama

We have chosen to apply the Kāi Tahu dialect when writing in te reo Māori. This means that the ng is replaced with a k (for example: whakarongo is changed to whakaroko). We have underlined the k whenever this has been applied.
